WORK IN PROGRESS

- Book project: “Who Won the Bible War? The Origins of Religious Liberty in Modern America.” The decision of the Cincinnati Board of Education to end Protestant Bible reading in the public schools in 1869 in response to Catholic demands for a share of the public school fund provoked outrage among the Protestant population, yet the Ohio Supreme Court sided with the school board in 1873 and invoked religious faith as one of its justification for doing so
 - “Competing Constitutional Traditions on Church and State: The Northwest Ordinance and the Cincinnati Bible War,” article draft.
- “Deskilling and the Loss of Moral Certainty: Sewing Education and Pattern Drafting in the 20th Century United States,” article draft.

- “Labor, Cost, and Style: Teaching the Economics of Dress and Dressmaking, 1910-1940,” article draft.
